

A One Year M.A. Program for English Teachers

M.A. in Translation Studies with a concentration in Teaching English as a Foreign Language (TEFL)

The Department of Translation and Interpreting Studies offers an M.A. program combining practical training with in-depth study and research. Applicants must hold a B.A. with an average grade of 80 or above, and a teaching certificate in English.

The TEFL courses within the translation program offer a distinctive blend of theory and practice enriching participants' fundamental concepts and equipping them with practical teaching tools for the EFL classroom.

The program provides opportunities for:

- diversifying career paths
- enhancing career development
- teaching the translation module for the English Matriculation Exam (Bagrut)
- situating classroom practice within sound theoretical frameworks
- gaining insight into the translation process of the Hebrew speaker
- completing an M.A degree in one academic year
